It seems like the answer to their prayers: a cash-in-hand residential job in a part of the country where no-one knows them – and no-one can find them. To single mother Bridget Sweeny and her daughter, Rospetroc House means sanctuary and a fresh start, with new names and new hope for the future. But the isolated manor on Bodmin Moor guards its own secrets: a history of high staff turnover and a disturbing reputation in the village. Strange things begin to happen: furniture moves by itself, Bridget hears whispers and footsteps in the empty corridors, and often has an eerie feeling that she is being watched. And Yasmin has made a new friend, Lily, but no-one in the village has ever heard of her. Meanwhile, Kieran – Yasmin’s abusive, obsessive, father – is doggedly seeking ways to track them down...
