The da Vinci CURSE: Life design for people with too many interests and talents Leonardo Lospennato
Do you keep jumping from hobby to hobby every few months? Are you still trapped in a bad job, one that has already run its course? The da Vinci Curse's "symptoms" are not pretty: contradictory interests, bursts of enthusiasm that soon fade, and the feeling that we are not really doing anything—at least not seriously. This happens to very particular people with many interests, talents and passions, people who feel that they still looking for one thing they can enjoy and excel at. There is hope, though: this book will help you find a specialized but heterogeneous profession—one that takes into account your best talents, your passions, and the need of monetization. These are your alternatives: dare to follow your own professional dream, or work hard for someone else who did precisely that. Your call!
