Innovation! It's the cure-all for an ailing America. So says conventional wisdom. And the engine of innovation is the American university – the wellspring of new knowledge to fill the technology and commercialization pipeline. But universities and their faculty are under attack as being poor stewards of what some perceive as a new mission. Who is right? What is the real story? "Go Forth and Innovate!" reveals a personal perspective on the inner workings of the modern research university and its role in the innovation ecosystem.
