An introduction to the non-Pauline epistles D. Edmond Hiebert

This book is intended as an introductory guide to the systematic study of the non-Pauline Epistles, that is, Hebrews and the General Epistles. It is not a commentary on these epistles, neither is it intended to displace the use of such commentaries. The aim is rather to provide a guide for the concentrated study of these epistles by furnishing the student the introductory material needed for their intelligent interpretation and directing him in tracing the thought content of these difficult, much neglected, yet important writings.
